HEIGHTS OF MOUNTAINS.

The highest summit of the mountains of Tibet in Asia, according to Col. Crawford, is 25,000 feet above the level of the sea, which is the highest point of land upon the face of the Globe.

The highest point of the Andes in South America is that of Chimborazo, which according to Baron Humbolt, is about 21 440 feet above the level of the sea. They stood 19,300 feet. The air was reduced to half its usual density, and felt intensely cold and piercing. Respiration was laborious; and blood issued from their eyes, their lips and gums. They stood on the highest spot, ever trod by man.

The Plains of Astinsana in South America, are 13,451 feet above the level of the ocean; which is 1,500 feet higher than the Peak of Teneriffe.

The highest mountain in Europe is Mont Blanc, in Switzerland, which is 15,580 feet above the level of the ocean.

Oertler Spitz in the Troyal, is 15 450 feet.

The highest land in Africa is in Abyssinia. The mountains Geesh are estimated to be above the ocean 5,950 feet.

EXIGENCY.

A tradesman pressing a gentleman very much for payment of his bill, the latter said, "You need not be in so great a hurry, I am not going to run away." "I do not imagine you are Sir," returned the tradesman, "BUT I AM."

An Irishman was lately brought before a Justice, charged with marrying six wives. The Magistrate asked him how he could be so hardened a villain? Please your worship, says Paddy, I was trying to get a good one.

Punning Compliment.

The following couplet on a left handed writing master, was writen about the beginning of the last century, by a celebrated Divine, and sent to his school, enclosing a handsome present.

Of thy Right hand by wayward fate bereft,
Right well thou writest with the hand that's left.

FROM THE NEW-YORK COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER.

Shipwreck.—Capt. Scott, late commander of the ship George Strong, has favored us with the following account of the loss of that valuable ship.

The ship George Strong under my command, sailed from Portsmouth, England, on the 13th of January, 1817, in excellent trim and condition, bound to Canton. On the 9th of Feb. wind east and weather hazy, ran for and at 2 P. M. made the Island Sal, one of the Cape de Verds; it being my intention to go through the channel between Mayo and St. Jago, and if a good opportunity offered to fill up my wather casks at Port Praya. In order to have a short and sure run, I hovered under the lee of Sal till 6 o'clock. Bird Island, near the west side of Sal, then bore E. S. E. about 8 miles distant. I directed such courses as would lead the ship well to leeward of Lenton Rock, and enter the above channel about midway between Mayo & St. Jago, inclining a little towards Mayo, it being to windward; and I had experienced the current to set south westerly. The breeze was just sufficient to carry all sail, and the weather smooth, which indicated a current setting to leeward. At mid-night, sail was reduced. The wind about the same time veered to E. N. E. and the haze had cleared considerably away.—A 3, A. M. sail was further reduced by hauling up the courses, lowering and slightly furling the mizen, and bracing the maintopsail sharp, by reducing the velocity to the rate of 5 miles per hour. I had been walking the deck from 2 o'clock except a few minutes whilst marking off the ship's place; and though every allowance was made for deviation her situation appeared to be far from dangerous. It was my intention at four o'clock to lay her head to the northward, & delay the time till daylight, which would naturally come on at or before 6. The moon had been up from half an hour after midnight, and shone bright, except at times when her rays were intercepted by flying clouds. At 4, land and breakers were discovered ahead. The ship was wore instantly and lay upon the starboard, or opposite tack, within 3 points of the track which led her on, going at the rate of 4 or 5 knots. I had not any doubt but the land and breakers were about the north part of Mayo; but it was out of all calculation that the ship should be so far to the eastward as to be in danger with a N. by W. course. I was therefore perfectly easy after wearing, when at 10 minutes past 4 she struck the ground—first gently and instantly harder.—The wind had increased and the sea risen, so that breakers which did not show themselves a few minutes before were now seen on both bows. The ship striking frequent & hard, I was soon fatally convinced she was entangled in a labyrinth from which no human skill or exertion could extricate her. She soon lost her way by being, as it were wedged among the rocks—nearly still at short intervals, but in general beating, wallowing and grinding, with such violence that I feared she would go to pieces before any of the valuable property could be placed above water mark. I directed the specie to be got up immediately, and whilst the first officer, who was very active, with part of the crew were engaged in that important service, a boat was lowered from the starboard quarter, with the boatswain and three others in her, to sound round the ship. A current of two knots setting E. S. E, carried the boat clear of the sea, which was breaking over, and she was conducted into three fathoms at 100 fathoms W. by S. and two fathoms S. W. the same distance. The boat, in coming alongside, was shattered to pieces, and two of the men narrowly escaped drowning. The boat was then veered astern, and lay well clear on the starboard quarter by the strength of the current. A little wine was now given to each man, and a strong remonstrance against the use of liquors, except when given them for refreshment. Encouragement was held out to them for exertion, and the danger they were in of losing life pointed out in case of relaxation. By 5 o'clock, all the specie was lodged on the cabin floor; and whilst the other boats with every possible safeguard were preparing, a good breakfast was ready, and, as nourishment strengthens both body and mind, every man was in a condition to perform his task by the time-day light gave a chance to act deliberately. The ship bilged at half past 5, and filled nearly up to the lower deck. The long boat about 6 o'clock was suspended alongside nearly the height of the rail. A small anchor and warp were put in her to moor by, and one end of another line made fast to her, the other end being fast to the ship as a hauling line. Some provisions were also put in her. The second officer and four men were then placed in her, with orders to pull quick into 3 fathoms and let go the anchor, and there wait for further orders.—A smooth interval was watched and the long boat got safe to her moorings. The shattered boat was hoisted in, and the carpenter, with the assistance of one man employed repairing her. The stern boat was lowered and safely suspended by the same tackles which had the long boat between the fore and mizen rigging. The sea by this time was breaking over both sides, and in at the stern of the ship, and no boat could lay alongside for ten seconds, the smooth intervals being so very short. The boat was then loaded with specie, provisions, and clothing. The crew were directed to send some of their cloths each turn. A smooth time was watched. Kneeland Curtis the boatswain, a very faithful active man, and four others were lowered in her. She got safe to the long boat was unloaded and returned. The same process was repeated six times. The hauling line was calculated for a double purpose, as every man in the passing boat could get hold of it had she been overwhelmed, (which was often nearly the case.) The men might have saved themselves by hauling either to the ship or long boat. A cask of water had with difficulty been hoisted out of the hold, and some kegs filled from it, which were also sent to the long boat. The 10th, by 1 o'clock P. M. the long boat was sufficiently deep. All the specie and many other necessary articles were on board of her. The passing boat was so much shattered, that I considered it dangerous to let her come again. My instruments and some charts were sent in the last boat, together with three compasses and some arms. I directed the boatswain to keep her about half way between the ship and long boat till he saw us all clear of the wreck. The quarter boat by this time was partially repaired and suspended the same as the other boats.—The masts, which had been the only means of saving so much, were tottering, and I feared annoyance from the top masts had they been cut away.

My mind had been so much occupied in the method of saving the lives of the crew and securing the treasure, that, with the exception of instruments charts and papers, my own property never gave me a moment's thought. I am indebted to the fidelity, vigilance and activity of Henry Clarke, who has been many years stewart with me, for saving the princi al part of my clothes. He after the specie was all safe to the long boat, had many of my articles ready for the remaining boat: They day was far advanced. I considered it dangerous and useless to stay any longer. A low rocky coast with a chain of breakers extending some distance from every part of it, stretched out to leeward; the distance of the road or harbor uncertain; I then before leaving the ship, directed a fine cow and calf (that I had taken on board in England, & intended for Hougua, the Hong merchant,) to be kaocked in the head, not being willing to leave them in a state of torture. The sheep, pigs and poultry were left alive. I conceived there was a chance of finding some vessel at the anchorage, which I might engage to return with me to the wreck, and that the live stock might be preserved, with other articles of more value. At 2, the remainder of the crew, myself the last, got into the boat, and at great hazard lowered her afloat. She was soon alongside of the long boat, though in a sinking condition, but by clearing her of part of the men and a quantity of clothing she could be kept free. Thus was the Gov. Strong left to her fate, with her stores, public and private, except such private stores and provisions as were distributed in the boats, (sufficient to serve the crew a few days.) About 4 o'clock, the boats, in company got under the lee of the N. W. point of the island, near which a tent and three men were seen. I landed in a cove, and engaged one of the men to conduct the boats to the port, well knowing we could not reach it till long after dark set in. After some sailing, & a great deal of hard rowing, reached the anchorage at nine o'clock, and were received on board the ship Delphia, with great kindness and hospitality. The brig Unity, of Baltimore Thomas Tomson, commander, lay at the anchorage, with whom I engaged to ship the specie, Captain T, in the most friendly and liberal manner offering to wait for me till my business could be arranged, and to take all that part of my crew which could not be received on board the other vessels, on condition of my finding provisions & water for them. Provisions and water casks were extravagantly high, but Capt. Thomas' offer was a favor not to be rejected at such a time and place. I therefore gladly accorded with it.

The inoment the specie was shipped, I engaged the only craft that could be procured, (a decked long boat) and embarked with the principal part of the crew at 4 P. M. the 11th, in hopes of reaching the wreck early in the morning, and saving some of the valuable articles. After a trial of twenty hours, gave up the attempt as fruitless, owing to strong adverse winds and current. On returning to the port, I directed that the wreck and such articles of her apparal as had been saved, should be sold at public auction for the benefit of those concerned, which, on the 12th was done accordingly. Protests, and such documents as it was posisble to obtain, was furnished on the 13th, and on the 14th, at 2 P. M. the Unity was under weigh, with 12 of the crew on board, myself included. The remainder were distributed as follows—Charles Hortison and George Crawly, on board the Delphina; John Whiting and Jas. Wallas, on board the Adeline, of Georgetown, Wood-side master; Samuel Hyatt, Benjamin Page, Joseph Rankin and Joseph Malker, on board brig Abby, of Salem, Potter, master, capt P. having taken 2 more than the U. S law points out, on condition of my finding a water cask for them. Water at the Isle Maya being of a poisonous nature, captain Thomas steered for Port Praya, in St. Jago, where we arrived about 5 o'clock. On landing I found the U. S. consul for the Islands, who annexed his certificate and seal to the protests. The watering was completed by noon. As capt. T. called at Port Praya on my account, I paid all charges. The Unity was soon after under way for her port of destination.

I now remark that on the most careful and accurate inspection, and allowing the extent of variation, (16 degrees westerly.) the course steered and distance made from the west side of Sal ought to have led the ship S. 7 degrees west, nearly 79 miles; whereas reality proved that she was forced into a course of S. 6 degrees east 82 miles to where she was lost, (in a run of 10 hours.) The calamity may be a beacon to others.

I am under great obligation to capt. J. B. Hough, who had the management of the Delphina, for his unremitting attention and assistance, I return my thanks to the officers of that ship for the kindness they shewed my crew.

Great credit is due to my crew for the zeal they displayed in saving so much valuable property, and tho' liquors of many kinds were among their hands, there was not one case of inebriety occurred whilst they were about the ship, and only one case after the boats left her.

I shall ever retain a greatful sense of the uniform and friendly accomodation received from Captain Thompson of the brig Unity.

ANDREW SCOTT.

N. B. In the foregoing remarks, I have explained the different points agreeable to Heather's Chart of the Cape de Verd Islands, published in the East India Pilot of 1813. I have experienced the correctness of that publication in many instances. I allowed variation of nearly sixteen degrees from my own experimental observations, the variation in that Chart being only twelve degrees. There is another Chart of those Islands, published by Norrie, in 1814, for Willam Reather, and attached to the East India Pilot of 1816, where the Island Mayo is laid down more to the Westward. It is probably more correct, though the variation is the same. My confidence in the first chart was strengthened by Bowditch's excellent book, the third edition of his Practical Navigator, in which the longitude of Mayo is laid down further to the Eastward, than in either chart. I have now to assert that their is an essential error in that case; though in the great variety of tracts pursued by me. I have in general found the latitudes and longitudes in that book much more correct than in any other. In this dissastrious case, a strong current setting, E. S. E was the cause, and not owing to any evident error in book or chart.

From the Boston Palladium

Extract of a letter from Leghorn, Jan. 20 to a house in this town.

"The staple articles of colonial produce are of constant sale here. Our prices are generally better than any of the Mediterranean markets, and our buyers more speculative. At present, our stock of sugar and coffee is very trifling, being only what the last arrivals within these few days have brought us. The English ship Sir Alexander Ball, from St. Domingo direct, and the Am. vessels stated at foot, have just arrived, with sugar and coffee but it will not affect our prices. Pepper has sold higher here, last season, than at other Italian markets. The whole stock of rum was bought here lately, on speculation, at 51-2 a 7 1-2 livres per gal. We apprehend that the high price of wines in this country has led to this speculation. A parcel of cotton Pernambuca, Bahia and Maranham, has just been sold at 50 cts per lb. Cod fish has proved a dull article this season, and this market has hitherto made worse prices than Naples, which, former years, was not the case.

"This market is decidedly the first of the Mediterranean for the sale of East India goods, as during the last 6 months not less than 800 bales have been bro't here, and sold; of which, 220 bales by American vessels; 230 from Lisbon by various flags; 350 from England, direct. The Sciota just arrived from Baltimore, has brought 400 bales more, which we consider too great a shipment for one adventure. A vessel from Boston has also brought 148 bales more of these goods. The importations from America are generally not so well assorted as those from England.

"Operations of great magnitude have been transacted in grain within the last 12 months; and although we are now only at the beginning of the season, the wants of Italy, Switzerland, some parts of Spain and France, are so great, that good Odessa wheat is selling at the extravagant price of 35 to 36 livres per sack, equal to 8s. per English quarter, nett— 27 to 28. Our market is quite clear of American Flour At present, we cannot calculate here upon more than 14 dolls. per bbl.—Carolina rice 34 to 36 livres per cwt.

"As tobacco is, in this state, a privileged article of government, unless the quality be such as their manufactories require, it sells worse than at our neighboring markets.

"Oils of this country have got up to such an extravagant price, that it cannot be sent to any foreign market. It may now be quoted at 78 livres per barrel.

"Of late, much has been done in rags for the American market. Orders should come in time for this article, as it cannot be collected and shipped at a short notice."

N. B. Besides the articles above mentioned, Florentine manufactured silks are exported from Leghorn, but their qualities, lengths and breadths, are too various to be comprised in a general price current.

Bologna crapes, velvets, silk stockings, gloves, wrought marble and alabaster statues and ornaments, cordials, wines, preserved fruits, all sorts of drugs, and the Levant and Barbary productions, are also to be procured to great advantage in Leghorn.

East India piece goods have an extensive and quick sale at this market, but, as only certain kinds are adapted to the demand, and those numerous, they cannot be included in these advices.

Extract of a letter from Lexington, Kentucky, March 28 1817.

"It is with the most painful sensations we have to communicate the sad destruction of most of the produce on the Kentucky River. After a season of dry weather, which prevented all the first boats descending, an incessant torrent of rain was experienced for four days and nights, which swelled the river beyond any flood ever known here before. It rose above its usual level, upwards of Eighty perpendicular feet, sweeping many warehouses and every thing before it. The loss of tobacco and other produce is immense."

ALEXANDRIA:
THURSDAY, APRIL 17, 1817.

To the Editor of the Gazette.

MR. SNOWDEN,

When I wrote my last letter, (see Monday's Gazette), I had not—indeed I could not have, read the account which I suppose you have seen in the Baltimore Federal Republican, of the dashing nuptials of "our gallant, gay Lothario," Mr. Ambassador Russell. That singular affair however comes so expressly in point as an illustration of the truth of my assertions in that letter, viz. that "in luxury, extravagance, ostentation, and all the solid sensuality as well as the fanciful frippery which distinguishes the old country, we do not lag far behind London on the day that George the 3rd was lost in his present mist of insanity," that a reader careless of dates might suppose I had it in my eye. But, I really had not; and as a proof that I had not, I will say that if I had had that incident before me, I should have gone much further, and approached much nearer to truth, by affirming that we do not at all lag behind the court of Carleton house at this day, or that of Versailles in the "palmy" days of Louis the 16th, and his queen Marie Antoinette. Is there any one so ignorant of the history of nations, so little versed in the nature of our species, as to contemplate the headlong progress of society in this country in the vanities & sensual indulgences of the old world, and yet believe it possible that we can remain a Republic or long retain our Liberties? Impossible.—To my certain knowledge, the fond extravagance and overweening display of gaudery which prevails among our opulent folks and is as awkwardly practised by their half bankrupt imitators, is noted by all foreigners with that sneer they ever have at our service, and that exultation which those who envy our prosperity may be supposed to feel at so flattering a promise of its downfall.

"It makes us traduc'd, & tax'd of other nations;
"They clepe us upstarts, & with swinish phrase
"Soil our addit'on,"

God forbid that the freedom of private will, so long as it is innocuous to the public, should ever be exposed to restriction! Though I shall ever agree with the wise old gentleman of antiquity that "Turpe senilis Amor," yet I have no idea of publicly censuring an old gentleman, even though he had as many children and as may years on his head as King Priam, for prevailing, if he can, on youth and beauty to make joint stock partnership with decrepitude and age—for dangling a doll at the head of his crutch, and committing the frolic or the outrage, call it which you will, of matrimony: but when I see a grave, old republican statesman, but for a short time transplanted from the very soil of simplicity, rigid frugality and stiff, cold prudence, (Rhode Island) into the very hotbed of luxury, sensuality, extravagance and vicious coxcombry, and coming back again infected & reeking with its steams, to disseminate all the exotic vices of that country in our yet wholesome soil, I cannot help regarding it as an augury to be deprecated, & foreboding the most baneful at once, and ridiculous consequences from it to our republican simpletons, who sooth to say, are as bewitched with the charms of "high life and high-lived company, with pictures, taste, Shakespeare, and the musical glasses," as Lady Carolina Wilhelmina Amelia Skeggs herself.* Rely upon it, Mr. Snowden, we shall have our ladies now all bedizened "Ala Turque"—Alexandria, Georgetown and Washington will be so many Constantinoples in miniature, and our great cities will be so beset with Sultanas, that our honest Jonathans of the country when they come to market will be apt to suppose that some necromancer had thrown a net over Turkey, enmeshed the seraglios; and emptied the contents of them into the simple, virtuous REPUBLIC of the United States; or else that the dog-star had struck the theatre with its fiery tail, enfrenzied the players while they were in the act of exhibiting a Turkish pantomime, and sent them parading the streets for the diversion of the populace. Adieu now the old graceful feminine dress; even negro wenches will disdain the petticoat, and our sober tradesmen and mechanic's wives will flit along the streets in frock, trowsers and boots. Oh, how I like to hear our street and grog-house declaimers inveighing against the vanity and folly of unhappy European princes, who being born under canopies of state, and swaddled in purple and fine linen, are trained to those fooleries, while they themselves take the first occasion that offers to throw off the parsimony, the simplicity and the sanctity in which they had been reared, and in their riper years to stoop to vices more pernicious, and to follies more mean.

Mr. Editor, my principles are so truly republican (i, e, what republican ought to be) that I could wish our intercourse with Europe were closed, and that above all, in that most susceptible part, our diplomatic connections, care should be taken to select those who are least capable of taking the infection of European fashionable manners: Little is it suspected what fatal conductors men in their rank may become of all that is dangerous to our habits, institutions and morals. I own that I have as much fear of ours in the moral world, as Burke had of the British ambassadors in the political. "These ambassadors (says he) may easily return as good courtiers as they went; but can they ever return from that degrading residence [Robespiere's court] loyal and faithful subjects, or with a true attachment to the constitution, religion or laws of their country? There is great danger that they who enter smiling into that Trophonion cave will come out of it sad and serious conspirators; and such will continue as long as they live.—They will become true conductors of contagion to every country which has the misfortune to send them to the source of that electricity. At best they will become totally indifferent to good and evil, to one institution or another. This species of indifference is but too generally distinguishable in those who have been much employed in foreign Courts; but in the present case, the evil must be aggravated without measure; for they go from their own country, not with the pride of the old character; and what they see in their new place of residence can have no effect in raising them to the level of true dignity, or of chaste self estimation. CURIO.

COMMUNICATED.

More of Mr. Russell and the Wedding.

Extract of a letter from a Lady in Boston to her friend in this city.

"I attended the wedding of the Hon. Mr. Rossell, late minister to Sweden, who was married at King's Chapel on Wednesday last to Miss Smith, only daughter of B. Smith, Esq. The concourse of people was so great, that we were in fear the galleries would give way, and such a scene of confusion I never before witnessed.

The bride was dressed in a white satin frock and trowsers, trimmed with lace a quarter of a yard deep—her boots were of white satin—her hat was in the turkish stile, also of satin, decorated with a feather confined with a superb pearl ornament, the whole having the appearance of a honey comb studded with pearls—her hair was very black, and curled close to her neck in clustering ringlets—the bosom of her dress was looped up fantastically with pearl-headed gold pins, and a pearl broach confined the whole. She had on her shoulders a small white satin mantle trimmed with swansdown, which hung off with much grace—and around her neck was a white lace long shawl.

The livery of the servants was white and gold, each mounting a white cockade. The horses' bridles were also trimmed with white satin ribbon with white vases on either side their heads.

Mr. ——— has six children, one of whom was bridemaid!!

New-York, April 14.

Captain Hiten, of the ship Parnasso, while lying at the Balize, received the following per the mail boat from New-Orleans.

On the 20th March a mob collected at New-Orleans, in consequence of the vane of the British ship Hamilton, representing the tri-colored flag in disguise to the present national flag of France. It resulted in the death of one English sailor, and several others wounded, and the destruction of the ship's masts and lower rigging; when General Ripley appeared with a part of his forces, on the discovery of which the mob dispersed without further contest.

The Congress frigate left the bar two days before the Parnasso, bound on a cruise. [Gaz.

We learn by the schooner Hiram, that Commodore Brown's despatch boat arrived at Curracoa on the 15th ultimo, from the Main, with a report that the Patriots had obtained a victory over the Royalists near Laguira. [ib.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser

"A friend has put into our hands a Paris paper of Jan. 26 a full sheet supplement of which is filled with the report of Count Beugnot to the house of Deputies, on the ways and means of defraying the expenses of 1817. After a view of the financial operations of past years, he proceeds to state the estimate of expenses of the year, which he makes sixteen millions less than the ministerial estimate as follows:

Ordinary expenses	468,000,000 fr.
Extraordinary do	431,000,000
Expenses of public debt	157,000,000
Making a total of	1,056,000,000 fr.

which is about equal to 198,000,000 of dollars. Of this sum it is proposed to raise 759,000,000 by taxes and imports of different funds, and the deficiency of 298,000,000 by a loan, from a company through which it was expected that the aid of foreign capitalists might be obtained. To enable the government to effect this loan, it was proposed to appropriate, from certain revenues the annual sum of 30,000,000"

The Paradise of Coquettes,

A POEM, in nine Parts.

A second edition of this elegant Poem is just published and for sale by the Subscribers.

The character of this Poem is thus given by the Quarterly and Edinburgh Reviewers:—

The Paradise of Coquettes;

The character in which the poet professes to speak, is that of the POET OF WOMAN. He is supposed to be addressing woman, and woman only, and addressing her, 'on adventures of which she is the heroine, and on charms and graces, which it is the whole history of her beauty to have exercised with failure or success.'

His incontestible merits, and the assiduous care which he has bestowed upon the poem, deserve the warmest praise.

Quarterly Review, Oct. 1814.

We have here a little volume which may be fairly regarded as a prodigy in this age of quarto ballads, romances, heroics, and sentimental simplicity. It is by far the best and most brilliant imitation of Pope, that has appeared since the time of that great writer; with all his point, polish, and nicely balanced versification, as well as his sarcasm and witty malice. He is always at home—always lively and entertaining.

His satire is polished and yet pungent.

His versification, in particular, is almost invariably flowing & harmonious.

Edinburgh Review, Feb. 1815.

"A vein of polite irony runs through the 'Paradise of Coquettes' which was familiar to the writers of the age of Anne and George the First, but has been discarded in making other modern improvements, by our cotemporaries."

James Kennedy & Son.
